Important Officials of Quincy Route Spend Day in the City.

LOOKING UP THE EXPOSITION TRAFFIC

They Make a Tour of the System to Acquire Information Upon Which to Recommend Improvements.

Five of the leading officials of the Omaha, Kansas City & Eastern road, with head-quarters at Quincy, Ill., are in the city. The members of the party are: H. S. Reardon, general manager; A. J. Bandy, general passenger agent; C. E. Gibbs, general freight agent; William D. Tucker, auditor, and C. Babcock, general counsel. They are traveling in a special car, making a tour of the system, and while in the city made a visit to the exposition, which was one of the objects of the visit to Omaha, as the officials desire to learn something of the demands which may be made upon the road in accommodating the traffic to this city during the summer. Mr. Bandy says the road and sample may arrange for through car service between Omaha and Kansas City if the busi-

None of the officials would discuss the future of the road, although it is understood that the present tour is made to learn what improvements in the system are most needed at present. Asked as to the outlook for the extension of the road from Quincy to Beardstown, where it would connect with the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, they replied that this project had not yet reached a stage where there was anything definite to give to the public.

With some members of the party this was the first visit to Omaha. All expressed the greatest satisfaction with the appearance of the city and the business situation

The plaintiff declares that she rented the remises at 1920 Wirt street early in March in order to accommodate exposition visitors and that since then she has been in continuous legal posession. She states that on June 13 the defendant came to her saying that his house had been struck by lightning, that he had no place to which to take his family and that be would like to have a couple of rooms for a few days. She gave him the key to the house for that purpose and she now declares that Schneider proved to be a good imitator of the camel who got his nose in the tent and speedily took possession of the whole premises. She says that she has several times tried to regain possession of the house, but that Schneider has moved his goods in and declares his determination to stay all summer. This she considers a conspiracy on the part of Schneider and her landlord to compel her to forfeit her rights. She adds that she has found that she is no match for "man's brute force" and asks for an injunction that

MONEY ALREADY SUBSCRIBED Fund for Welcome to First Regiment

The finance division of the committee on the reception of the First regiment has issued a letter to the members of that body throughout the state, giving them full directions as to the work of obtaining subscriptions to the reception fund. The letter suggests the appointment of a committee in each city and town to gather subscriptions and spread the idea of the movement among the people. It is not expected that any great amount of soliciting will be necessary to raise the fund, but that every citizen will be anxious to give what he can to help swell the amount when he understands what is to be done. No amount, the letter

Today the subscription list will be ready for publication. The committee has not yet received the subscription lists from the printer, but already subscriptions to an amount not far from $1,000 have been These have all come from members of the general committee, or persons who have been present at its meetings, as the movement has not been under way long enough to be familiar to the general public.
